GOULD DEFEATS MONMOUTH 13-0

Gridsters To Play at Hebron Saturday—Expect Tough Battle

Gould Academy opened its 1933 season with a 13-0 win over Monmouth Academy. The winners looked good on the defense but the running attack failed often during the game. The first period found the two teams playing on nearly equal terms but in the second quarter after long gains by Browne and Bartlett, Browne finally crossed the goal line for the first touchdown. Bartlett scored the extra point on a center kick, making the score 7-0 at the half time.

After the twelve minute rest the Blue and Gold promptly set to work to score another touchdown, this time the goal being crossed by Martinson after some rugged defense on the part of the visitors within the 10-yard line. The extra point failed leaving the score 13-0. There were no particular stars for the winners, each man seemed to take care of his position well for an opening game. The linemen played a particularly good defensive game with each man breaking through to spill the ball carriers for losses. For Monmouth Academy, Chick at half-back starred, but the entire team put up a game and rugged fight.

This Saturday the Gould Academy gridsters will travel to Hebron to take on the reserves of that institution. Gould is looking for a tough battle as Hebron has an excellent football machine this year. The game will be played at 10 o'clock Saturday morning and the squad will stay to see the Hebron varsity game in the afternoon.

The next home game will be with Mechanic Falls a week from Saturday. The Mechanic Falls team is a veteran outfit from last year and are putting up some fine football. South Paris High had their hands full but managed to eke out a 13-0 win over them last week. Much interest is being shown in the coming games.

TRAIN TIME CHANGED

Beginning last Sunday, Oct. 1, the time of the west bound morning train at Bethel station is 10:26, instead of 10:10, and the afternoon east bound is 2:47 instead of 2:37.

MAURICE MASON

Friends of Maurice Mason were saddened to hear of his death, which occurred at Bangor on Tuesday, September 26. He was born at West Bethel 60 years ago, the son of Albion P. and Hannah Philbrook. He attended the town schools and Gould Academy, and when a young man he went to Massachusetts where he had employment on electric cars. For the past 25 years he has lived at Bangor and at the time of his death was a railroad conductor. He is survived by several cousins in Bethel and Norway.

PAST MASTERS CONDUCT OXFORD POMONA TUESDAY

Oxford Pomona met with Bear Mountain Grange, South Waterford. About 125 regular members were present and several visitors including one from New York and two from Massachusetts.

The meeting was conducted by the past masters and their wives, there being eight past masters present. A bountiful dinner was served in the dining hall.

The meeting was then placed in the hands of past master, L. E. Wight acting as lecturer. Greetings by past master W. K. Hamlin of Bear Mountain Grange and response by Ellis Davis, master of Oxford Pomona; a roll call of past masters was taken, each one responding by relating instances which occurred during their terms of office. Charles George having passed his 99th birthday headed the list.

Deputy Stevens of York County entertained with stories; remarks by Brother Snow, lecturer of York County Pomona; Walter Chandler, secretary of the Oxford County grange fire insurance company, spoke on fire prevention work.

Alton C. Wheeler, Auburn, was the speaker of the afternoon. He talked on the two grange tax measures and gave several reasons why they were defeated and expressed his opinion that they would be taken up again. He also talked everyone to stand by the principles briefly on the N. R. A. and urged that it involves.

The next meeting of Oxford Pomona will be at Bethel, Nov. 7, with New Century Pomona as guests. They will also confer the fifth degree.

FRESHMAN RECEPTION AT GOULD TONIGHT

The Annual Freshman Reception at Gould Academy will be held in the William Bingham Gymnasium on Thursday evening at 7:45 o'clock under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Club. Mrs. John G. Gehring and Dr. and Mrs. George B. Farnsworth, members of the Board of Trustees, will be special guests of the Seniors. Miss Ruth Leavengood, head of the department of Dramatics and Vocal Music, will present a one-act play, "Not Quite Such A Goose" with the following cast of characters:

Sylvia Bell, Barbara Bennett, Albert Bell, Harlan Hutchins, Mrs. Bell, Marguerite Tibbets, Philip Flick, Stanley Allen, Hazel Henderson, Marguerite Hall

A solo dance will be given by Roberta Browne and a vocal selection by Elizabeth Bean. The entertainment will be followed by a program of dances and games.

P. T. A. MEETING

The meeting of the Parent teachers Association will be held in the grammar school building next Monday evening. The program below has been arranged by the committee: Miss Maxine Clough, Mrs. John Poole, Mrs. Lena Wight, Song, Elizabeth Bean, Dumb Play, Talk, Supt. L. E. Williams, Rumford Piano Duet, Wilma and Marguerite Hall

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Mrs. Virella M. Crosby announces the engagement of her niece, Miss Dorothea Burbank, to Raymond B. Thomas of Claremont, N. H.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Philbrook and Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Merrill attended the wedding of Clarence Philbrook and Miss Corallan Perry at Williamstown, Vt., last week.

BETHEL GRANGE TO SPONSOR PLAY

First Local Production of Season, "Henry's Wedding" at Grange Hall, October 16 and 17

"Henry's Wedding," a three-act comedy play will be presented by 125 local actors Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 16-17, under the sponsorship of the Bethel Grange. The play revolves around Uncle Henry, a bachelor of 55, who has been keeping company with Susan Christopher, a spinster for 30 long years. He goes to California and falls in love overnight with Samantha Green, a widow, and gets into many difficulties. Jack, his nephew, and his chums plan to kidnap him, and much comedy is furnished regarding the situation.

While the cast of characters is not yet complete, mention of the names below with the parts assigned will assure a pleasing production.

Uncle Henry, Harold Lurvey
Samantha Green, the widow, Uncle Henry's bride, Marjorie McAllister

Susan Christopher the old maid,
Oliver Lurvey

Jack, Henry's nephew,
"Biff" Wight

OT'cherty the Irish detective,
Eugene Whitman

Reverend Lawyer Brown,
W. R. Myers

Harris, Jack's chum,
Herbert R. Rowe

Virginia, Maxine Clough

Chicago Gangster, Win Howe

Eliza, the colored maidservant,
Elsie Davis

Brother Jones, a colored minister,
Fred Clark

Sister Sals,
Helen Berry

Besides the three act comedy the special feature is the Beaus and Belles of Grandma's Time. These are portrayed by the leading citizens of Bethel and surrounding towns.

Also another attraction is the Mystic Shrine meeting, consisting of 40 or more singers led by Brother Jones, singing old time Southern melodies. No show is complete without chorus girls, so a group of forty chorus girls will sing and dance throughout the play.

The town clerk has issued the license and everything is shaping itself for a big wedding. "Henry's Wedding" is under the direction of Miss Ysobel MacGangler of the Universal Producing Co.

THANKS TO DONORS FOR BUCK FUND

I desire to express my thanks to the Lions Club, George A. Mundt, Post American Legion, Ladies' Auxiliary, Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the forty-two friends who contributed cash and merchandise to the relief fund for Ernest Buck's family, of which Henry H. Buggs was Treasurer, and I was Chairman. It is surely gratifying to know that so many responded to my appeal. I also wish to thank them all of the sincere appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Buck. The entire amount contributed, including merchandise, was $429.55.

STEEL FOR NEW ACADEMY TOWER BEING ERECTED

The steel work for the new Academy tower is now going up and within the next week it is expected that all the steel will be in place. During the past week half the basement slab has been poured and waterproofed. The masons are now setting the limestone for the front columns.

GORHAM MAN IN COURT FOR NORTH NEWRY BREAK

Claude Littlehale of Gorham, N. H., formerly of Newry was in the municipal court at Rumford Friday charged with breaking, entry and larceny. He pleaded not guilty. He was charged with breaking into the camp of V. C. Isola at North Newry. Many articles of value were taken and several articles identified by Mr. Isola as belonging to him were found at the home of Littlehale's father. Probable cause was found and Littlehale was ordered to furnish bonds of $500 for his appearance at the November term of Superior Court.

RUMFORD 6--GORHAM 1-- ANOTHER GAME SUNDAY

A crowd of about 300 witnessed the baseball game at Riverside Park Sunday afternoon when the Rumford league team took the first of a series of three games from the crack Gorham, N. H. line by the score of 6-1. The second game between these two teams will be called at the same place at 2 p. m. next Sunday, October 8. Batteries: Leavitt and Poy, Gorham; Foster and Hovin, Rumford. Umpires: Field of Rumford and Lurvey of Bethel.

John Berry, making a good recovery from an operation for appendicitis performed last Friday at the C. M. G. Hospital, Lewiston.

A lovable old maid, fat and on the verge of poverty.

Three sisters, all married, all with social connections and aspirations.

A scape-grace brother who had inherited the family estates in Virginia and lost the old homestead.

The old maid sister turns adventuress.

She finds money, and suitors, and fun and pathos.

With such ingredients Therese Benson has built an unusually good, typically American story, that will appear serially in these columns.

PLUCK AND LUCK
Oliver Wendell Holmes

One constant element of luck
Is genuine solid old Teutonic pluck.
Stick to your aim, the mongrel's hold will slip;
But only crows will loose the bulldog's grip.
Small though he looks, the jaw that never yields
Drags down the bellowing monarch of the fields.

JUST TO BE GLAD
James Whitcomb Riley

Oh! heart of mine, we shouldn't worry so!
What we have missed of calm, we couldn't have, you know!
What we have met of stormy pains,
And of sorrow's driving rain,
We can better meet again,
If they blow.

We have erred in that dark hour,
we have known;
When the tears fell with the showers, all alone,
Were not shine and shadow blent
As the gracious Master meant?
Let us temper our content
With His own.

For we know not every morrow can be sad;
So, forgetting all the sorrow we have had,
Let us fold away our fears
And put by our foolish tears,
And through all the coming years,
Just be glad.

THE RICHER MINES
John G. B. Bangs

When it comes to buying shares
In the mine of earth,
May I join the millionaires
Who are rich in mirth.

Let me have a heavy stake
In fresh mountain air
I will promise now to take
All that you can spare.

When you're setting up your claim
In the Mines of Glee,
Don't forget to use my name—
You can count on me.

Nothing better can be won,
Freer from alloy,
Than a bounding claim in "Consolidated Joy."

You can have your Copper Stocks
Gold and tin and coal—
What I'd have within my box
Has to do with Soul.

THE SIMPLE THINGS

Seemed that mother only cared
For the simple things of life;
Seemed that mother never shared
In the turmoil and the strife.
Simple things were her delight,
Closer to her heart, I guess;
Tears would fill her eyes at sight
Of a little baby's dress.

Mother never cared for show,
She was satisfied to dwell
In her humble way, and know
Those she loved were doing well.
Many keepsakes mother kept,
Always simple things she'd choose;
Many times has mother wept
O'er a little pair of shoes.

Little socks that once were worn,
And a little bow of blue;
There's a little nightgown, torn,
Where a baby's foot went through.
These are all the simple things
She has treasured through the years;
And each one a memory brings
Of a baby's smiles and tears.

Only simple, simple things,
Little booties, soiled, 'tis true;
But to them she fondly clings,
Seems that mothers always do.
Closest to her heart they lie,
Sacred treasures none may share;

Only for a mother's eye,
Clothes the baby used to wear.

Men have come and gone, and by Monuments of chiseled stone,
Towering upward to the sky,
What they were on earth is known.
But a little baby leaves,
Only little simple things;
And to them a mother clings,
Greater monuments than kings.

LEGION PRESENTS "HEADS UP" SOON

The American Legion is about to present the hit show of the year, "Heads Up!", a four-act farce comedy. It is undoubtedly the best show of its kind ever produced in New England, the songs and music being original, and written especially for the production. The scene is laid in the mezzanine of the Maxwell House in Seven Fountains, Virginia, and the plot concerns itself with a mayoral election and a crooked hotel syndicate. Between the two, mixed with a bunch of peppy fraternity men and sorority girls, there's plenty of excitement in the little town. Two more groups that come into the show are the talented professors, taken by business men about town, and the Civic Leaguers, taken by young matrons.

A few of the characters now in the show are: Dr. Wilson and June Brown taking the leads; Harold Lurvey, Earl Davis, Wilbert Bartlett, Earl Eldredge, Win Howe, Henry Bennett, Fitz Vall, Doris Lord, Arthur Dudley, Everett Marshall, Eugene Van, Charles Freeman, Bobby Brown, Mrs. Lesmore Currier, Albert Grover, Elmer Bennett, Arthur Cutler. A few of the fraternity boys are: Trafton Bartlett, Herbert Rowe, Buster Brown, Edward Poole, Warren Hutchinson. Some professors are Milo McAllister, John Harrington, Grover Brooks, Paul Head, Leslie Coburn, Ray York. The Civic Leaguers particularly comprise: Lenzie Howe, Blanche Howe, Marjorie McAllister, Grace McFarlane, Grace Coburn, Bernice Heath.

In addition there is a singing and dancing chorus consisting of pretty Academy girls, several specialties, and a courtroom scene entitled "Good-morning Judge!"

All in all, "Heads Up!" should provide two hours of the best entertainment ever. It is being presented Thursday and Friday nights, October 26 and 27 in Odeon Hall.

Cause of Grant's Death

Seven years after Grant had left the Presidency he began to have severe pains in his throat. A prominent physician examined the former President at his summer home and advised that he consult a specialist at once. This Grant did not do. This was in September, 1926.

January, a pathologist pronounced the condition cancer. The condition grew steadily worse; Grant was on the defensive. The malignant condition had progressed too far to permit a cure, although skillful medical and surgical attention was given by a number of eminent specialists.

The battle was a losing one, and on July 23, 1923, the eighteenth President of the United States died. Hygeia Health Magazine.

UPTON

Several ladies went from this town to Errol, N. H. to the Pythian Slaterhood meeting, Tuesday, Oct. 3.

The Upton ladies furnished the program for the evening. A covered dish supper was served. One covered dish contained a birthday cake for Addie Colby.

Miss Lillian Judging was home from Gould over the week end.

The first frost of the season to do much damage in town occurred this week.

my Breath is it offensive?

Not sure, nobody mentions it. Sometimes caused by tooth, more often by disordered stomach. Common forms of indigestion, dry and pasty mouth, furred tongue, acidity or sour stomach, gas in stomach or bowels, dizziness, headache, constipation, disagreeable conditions like these yield quickly to the oil family remedy, "L. THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1933

WILSON'S MILLS

Henry Ruman of Bethel arrived in town the first of the week with a pair of new horses. He and son-in-law, Owen Richards, are preparing to log on Abbott Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen of Shawhegan were guests of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H.
Hart, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Odeon Turner and three children called on Mr. and Mrs. Floyd West Wednesday evening.

Some are having to gather their garbage as the deer are eating them up.

Two deer were in our yard eating clover until long after daylight this morning. They are about as tame as cows.

Mrs. W. H. Hart had as guests Sunday her son and daughter and family of Lewiston, N. H.

George Bennett and Clinton Bennett are at Parmachenee guiding for two weeks.

Alfred Hart and Claude Linnell were up the lake Monday, bird hunting. Going along in the boat they saw two wildcats. One escaped but they shot a small one, about as large as a house cat.

W. H. Hart had 124 bushels of potatoes this year. Nearly everyone has lots of vegetables.

Clarence West and family were in Rumford Saturday evening.

We are having lovely weather,
nice sunny days but cold nights.

Floyd West is painting the house at the dam.

Paul West and wife of Berlin
were in town Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Nason were in Colebrook, N. H., Monday.

Find Fish Sleep

The question whether fish sleep has been settled so far as the director of the London zoo aquarium is concerned. He found that nearly all of them do. He has watched them, he says, and reports that some of them sleep for days at a time.

Bee-Shipping Center

Cottonwood, Calif., situated in Shasta county and one of California's smallest towns, holds the distinction of being the largest live bee-shipping center in the world.
State department of agriculture officials said virtually all of the 2,000 tons of live bees shipped from California last year were sent from Cottonwood.

GORHAM NORMAL NOTES

The Junior Reception of the Gorham Normal School was held recently in Russell Hall. Misses Sonia R. Cohen of Rumford, Ruth D.
Mills of South Paris, and Doris A.
Hunt of Norway; Reginald D. Edwards of Mechanic Falls, Arthur A.
Kilburne of Bridgton were among those welcomed by the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations. The gymnasium was attractively decorated with autumn leaves and fir branches. A large receiving line greeted the new students, consisting of the Gorham Normal School teachers, training school teachers, the ministers of the town and the President of the Christian Associations. Refreshments of sandwiches, punch, ice cream and cookies were served.

The first of the series of hikes sponsored by the Outdoor Club was held this week. This club organizes these hikes for the purpose of acquainting the pupils with the walks around Gorham and to point out places of historical interest.
Over 70 members went on the first hike. Among these were Irene Tubbs of Norway, Margaret Dalzell of Bethel, Ruth Mills of South Paris, Doris Hunt of Norway and Corene Palmer of Auburn.

Among those who are going out for Cross Country this year are Norman Platsted of Jay, Monroe Bean of Livermore Falls, and Laurence Bartlett of Bethel. The first run with a bear by school will take place October 17.

Miss Joanna Stone spent the week end at her home in Bridgton.
Miss Margaret Dalzell of Bethel was the guest of her parents over the week end.

Miss Doris Hunt of Norway was elected vice-president of the Athletic Association at a meeting held Tuesday, Sept. 26, in the old gymnasium.

Cabinet Members

Are Given Soaking

By WILLIAM L. BRUCKART
Washington.—White House attaches are laughing these days at the so-called cabinet members who are being soaked by two members of the cabinet whose identity they refuse to disclose but who seem to have been the victims of the Roosevelt open door policy.

There is a great fountain and pool filled with fish-pots at the east entrance to the Executive manison. This entrance is used only occasionally by the cabinet members, but evidently the two members in question were in a hurry and took a short cut. Their arrival at the east gate coincided with the time a stray dog chose to deposit himself in the pool, and they watched the fun. The dog seemed to feel perfectly at home on the White House grounds, and no one molested him. But after he had had his play he leaped from the pool to the side of the two apparently new-found friends.
Then he did exactly what every dog does. He shook that water off. Striped trousers and spats were well soaked, but the cabinet members went on to the meeting with the President.

The Dalmatians

The Dalmatians, who are now partly Jugoslavian and partly Italian in their national allegiance, says the Washington Star, have had a varied career in history, first passing under the flag of one nation, then another. At the time of the outbreak of the World war the Dalmatians were part of the Austrian empire, their coast along the Mediterranean being of vital importance to the Austrians. At one time Dalmatia was quite a sizeable kingdom, but after it finally fell before the assault of the armies of Augustus it had a varied career.
After the fall of Rome Dalmatia passed into the hands of the Goths, Saxons, Venetians, French and Italians finally winning up as part of Austria up until the World war.

A Goddess' Mistake

Aurora was one Greek goddess who didn't think quite far enough.
Known as the mother of the winds, Aurora, who was the daughter of Hyperion, fell in love with a mortal, Tithonus. Through her intercession, the other gods granted Tithonus immortality, but Aurora forgot to include perpetual youth in her request and Tithonus grew older and older until he became so feeble that Aurora was forced to leave him as much as a helpless baby.

Gradually Tithonus grew more and more shriveled until finally Aurora, no longer able to devote her time to him, but unable to end his life, changed him into a cricket.

Money Gets Bath After

Fish Dealers Handle It

London.—London's dirtiest money circulates in the Billingsgate fish market.

Once used there, so contaminated does metal money become that it has to be boiled before it is suitable for release by banks.

Several banks near the market have been compelled to set up kitchens on coppers, where the coins are cleaned in boiling water before they are issued to other customers.

In the case of paper money, the notes are used only once—they circulate in the market and are then exchanged at the bank for fresh issues. Notes once used in Billings-gate market never lose the peculiar odor.

Sometimes the coins go black but more generally green. One bank reports a customer opened a bag containing $50 in silver and found many of the coins corroded together in lumps.

The "money laundry" in most of the banks consists of a stew-pan, washing soda, sacks of drying dust and stoves—in case fish scales get mistaken for the smaller coins.

Glow Worms Set Trap

to Catch Food Supply

Most people are acquainted with the glow worm—the insect whose phosphorescent light is frequently seen in country lanes. In Walatomo, North Island, New Zealand, there is a cave called the Glow-Worm cave, where the insects live under shelter.

By the light of a strong torch one can see the worms overhead, with little threads which look like strings of seed pearls hanging from them.
The strings are sticky and are the means of catching mosquitoes and other tiny insects, which, attracted by the glow worm's light, fly to their doom.

As they struggle on the sticky surface they set up vibrations which warn the worm that a capture has been made. The worm then hauls up the threads and the victims are devoured. Should there be no foodly insects to be captured, the worm can live on its threads, which it eats and then spins new ones. When observing glow worms, it is necessary to preserve absolute silence, for if the least sound is made the threads vibrate and the glow worms put out their lights.

The worms owe their existence to a certain fly which lives for a month and lays eggs from which emerge the glow worms; these, in turn, live about three months. At the end of that time they spin a cocoon, from which in due course more flies issue forth to lay more eggs and thus start the strange cycle again.

CHAPTER II

FIRST glance the history of the Lovelys, of Lovelys, Va., had little of interest to the news-monger or novelist. It was not the legendary pen-patrons, imprinted on the pages of their pride by the Civil War. On the contrary, the war had made the Lovelys of that day rich for their time. In the years thereafter, heartless capitalists had entered their fastnesses, covering coal lands belonging to the West Virginia; and while it was regrettable that a high price might have been realized, the Lovelys then reigning were not the Lovelys of old. It is pleasant to hear that for a property rich as so worthless that the heartless capitalists had made him that he alone owned and gave little to it, he resumed that permitted him riches and every indulgence.

which enough remained at the of his death to make his rich man. His heir, in turn, before he had time to impart inheritance. His son, another Lovely, married the day he of age, a girl who proved to be a blessing influence, and that marriage was blessed puncture two years by progeny. The children were handsome the youngest, named Matilda, after her mother's mother, a picture. Before she could her mother being dead, her carried her in front of him a saddle, exhibiting her to relations. His pet name was "Lovelyness," a name as soon as she could talk she was with scorn.

She is Smif, Smif, Smif!" she shout. And he accepted, as very one else, the name of for his youngest son. She the baby, the pet of the older and of the whole family. Smif was quite a big before she learned to speak. By that time it would required a violent effort to the habit of calling her Smif, Lovely was given to effort in the search for amuse-

Lovely was killed by a fall his mount returning from a and young Bill-Lee, now Lee in his turn, reigned in his every one's surprise, when the read he proved to have into an empty inheritance. Lee the elder had divided his equally among his daughters, who had no power to as brother before they came to go. Each of them re a round hundred thousand. Bill-Lee the ten-thousand state of Lovelys, the non-residential estate and the in to give his sisters a home as they remained unmar-

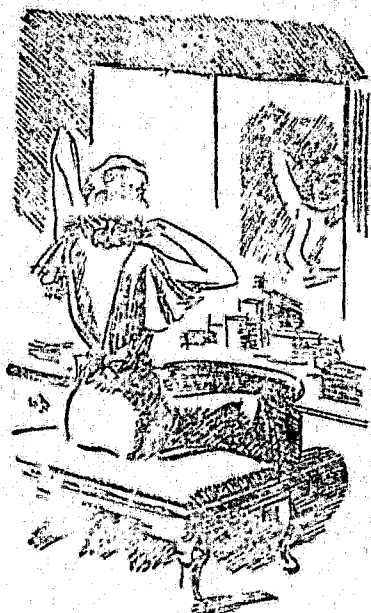

Bill-Lee, at that time two years old, taking Smif

her Aunt Smif, then only twenty-two herself, Bill-Lee had remembered his youngest sister's proffer of aid and had turned to her confidently when he needed help after the death of his wife, the penniless daughter of the American consul at Guayaquil. By that time both Lucy and Louise were married, comfortably if not brilliantly settled. Smif had begun to change from the charming child he remembered into a huge woman, so over-weighted with flesh that she was always judged to be far more than her age.

Laura, the most beautiful as well as the eldest of the Lovely sisters, at that date was also still unmarried. She had one passion and one only; the preservation of her beauty by natural, not artificial, means. To insure that she took many precautions. She was very popular, very handsome, and, as the years went by, she kept a place for herself in the younger set as it matured by a carefully calculated generosity.

Her choice of a husband had fallen on James Hammersley, a man verging on fifty. Jim Hammersley was rich; and able and willing to gratify her whims; his social position was a little expressed it to Lucy, her sole confidante, "entirely suitable to a Lovely of Lovelys." There would be no necessity for her to struggle to assert herself.

Thus at thirty-eight, when her niece Cintra was married, she would have been taken by a stranger for her husband's daughter, or the youngest of the handsome Lovely sisters. And the youngest she intended to remain, costing anybody else what it might.

Carried before her father on his horse, or later at his side on his own pony, Matilda Smith Lovely had learned to know every wood and brook and dell of his possessions in all weathers and she had absorbed many of his tastes and peculiar preoccupations.

At Lovelys she spent the happiest days of her life, and for the dignified old mansion and its surrounding acres she had a depth of affection that was not suspected by her sisters or brother; the tears she had shed on their departure being attributed to her grief at parting from Bill-Lee. Actually she had been eager for him to start on his great adventure, feeling certain that he would soon return in the guise of the prince in the fairy tale, bringing with him enough of the wealth of the Incas to enable them all to come back in triumph to Lovelys and live happily ever after, according to the proper pattern; or, if the elder girls persisted in their perverse intention to stay in New York and acquire rich husbands, she hoped that by that time she, Smif, might be adjudged old enough to act as chaperone for Bill-Lee.

This dream received its first shock when her brother married. To her mind, the money spent to support his wife and child in luxury was money willfully diverted from the redemption of Lovelys. From then on, she knew Bill-Lee for a weakling and laid her plans accordingly; plans destined to be sadly disarranged when Cintra was sent to her with a reminder of her childish promise.

Smif came of a stock whose word was their bond. Unquestionably she accepted the responsibility thrust upon her, and gave her niece a lesson so unselfish that no one ever doubted its inspiration was affection; Cintra, who was beautiful but brainless, least of all.

Now, when at last she was freed from her burden, Smif's greatest desire remained unchanged. To regain possession of the family estate was her goal. Her brother was ready to assume that further effort was useless and he had pointed out that where he was, living was easy and cheap. Plainly the old life in Virginia, love for which seemed to have entered the very marrow of her bones, no longer held a lure for him. He was content in South America and meant to stay there.

Smif wrote Bill-Lee a long letter in which she set forth the argument that as he had no love for Lovelys and she had, she wished the opportunity of buying it from him at the expiration of the present lease.

This letter would have impressed her brother as even more extraordinary than it did had he known how nearly she had ruined herself for him and his child. However, he was never one to reject any favorable chance requiring no exertion on his part. If Smif wanted to sink her money in the old place, by all means let her! Probably by this time she was a rich woman an old maid who had found no way to spend her income in all these years.

And so the matter had been settled. At some sacrifice, Smif had sent a thousand dollars as earnest of her intention, fearing him if want and too proud to confess her "outlets" for it must be put down to Bill-Lee's credit that he had laid upon her as he might have done, although from time to time he had accepted the helping hand she had offered him.

With unusual business for a girl, Smif had demanded and duly received an acknowledgment setting forth this payment and their agreement, for Cintra's information should it happen that she had died before her aunt had exercised her option.

The possession of this document warmed Smif's heart even though she had no idea where she could obtain a sum of money sufficient to avail herself of the opportunity it held out to her. That Cintra might want to take over the ancestral halls had never seriously entered her head and, if it had, would at once have been dismissed. The place was only a name to the girl.

Knowing it to be her goal, Smif yet longed to stay at Lovelys with the child through the changing seasons, to awaken in her a love for the land since, unconsciously at the time even to herself, she was already fearful that Bill-Lee would neither return there nor marry again. Reading between the lines of his letters, she divined that he had parted with Cintra joyful at his release from family cares and expenses. He had made it quite plain that his daughter was to be hers to do with as she would. And she reasoned that since there would be no male heir, in the fullness of time Lovelys would be Cintra's.

At that date it seemed essential to Smif that the little girl should see the place and learn to love it; but her grandmother gently negated the suggestion. Anything else they wished they might do, but they were not to go to Lovelys.

Smif inquired discreetly the reason for the prohibition, and the answer at first made her smile.

Mr. Johnstone Nesbit was not a Virginian.

"Grandmother, darling," she cried, "that really has ceased to be a crime. I've met some quite charming gentlemen who have had the misfortune to be born outside of our beloved state."

"Gentlemen, yes," Mrs. Culpeper agreed. "I should have said further that this man Nesbit is not a gentleman. He has lived here for years and he is received nowhere. You cannot visit your home while he is its tenant. He certainly was mighty kind to your cousin Christopher."

Smif's grandmother's commands were neither questioned nor disputed, and so it happened that Cintra on that visit did not see the home of her father's fathers.

Later, when Smif had plumbed the shallows of her niece's nature, she never troubled to take her to Lovelys again. Cintra had no depths either of affection, intellect, or humor. She expressed and felt no regret at leaving her father and the land of her father. She was quite contented in New York; quite contented in fact anywhere. She was absolutely negative and as little trouble as a child could well be. And she was always a pleasant serene loveliness. As a companion a fine who doll would have been equally sympathetic.

In time Smif gave up attempts to rouse a spirit that did not exist, thanking her stars that when Cintra talked (which she did as seldom as possible, preferring to present the appearance of an enthralled listener) the views she expressed were commonplace that led to no controversies.

It was after the announcement of the girl's engagement that Smif had entered into the agreement to buy Lovelys, Cintra having mildly stated one day that she could see no reason for Auntie Smif to expect her to be interested in "that queer old place."

That matter satisfactorily arranged, it occurred to Smif that she would like to know something about the tenant, the ungentlemanly Mr. Nesbit, of whom she had heard no mention since her visit to Culpeper court ten years previous.

She wondered what had been the crime against society that had roused her grandmother's ire.

To be continued next week.

Irving L. Carver has been appointed vice-chairman of the Maine petroleum code committee which is to attempt to stabilize the oil industry through the code signed by the President.

The marriage of Anna Fernald and Carl Johnson, both of West Poland, has been announced. Mrs. Johnson is a graduate of Gould Academy, class of 1931, and grand daughter of the late Senator Bert M. Fernald. Mr. Johnson is a senior at the University of Maine.

Dr. E. L. Brown is making extensive additions to his equipment, including a new chair and dental unit. A short time ago he added a nitrous oxide gas outfit. In many ways the doctor's office is as well as or better equipped than are dentists' offices in much larger places. Members of the Epworth League and invited friends enjoyed a social held in the Methodist Church Friday evening. One of the special features of the entertainment was a treasure hunt which gave much enjoyment to those participating. Upon their return from the hunt games of various kinds were enjoyed and refreshments served.

There were an attendance of over a hundred at the electrical home exhibit which was stationed near C. W. Hall's barber shop last Friday. The display was in a small cottage mounted on a large truck chassis, and for the past few months has been making a tour of the Central Maine Power Company's territory.

Rev. Israel Jordan preached his farewell sermon at the Second Congregational Church, Falmouth, Sunday, completing a pastorate of 31 years. He plans to retire from active ministry and with Mrs. Jordan will live in Portland this winter. Mr. Jordan was pastor of the Bethel church five years, being ordained there in 1892.

JOHN RICHARDSON

John Richardson of Gilead died Monday at the Central Maine General Hospital, Lewiston, where he had been for the past three weeks. He was born in Bethel, May 6, 1866, the son of Eli T. and Hannah Twitchell Richardson. Until a few years ago he carried on a farm on the north side of the river in Gilead, but since moved to Gilead village. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lizette Richardson; a daughter, Mrs. Florence Holden; and a son, Carl, all of Gilead.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, conducted by Rev. L. A. Edwards. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery, Bethel.

The Used Fifty-Seven Years
Probably one of the oldest railway crossings in existence is still in service three miles east of Newton, Mass., on the Vicksburg division of the Illinois Central. This it was placed in the track in 1872 and has been in continuous use since that date. The tie has borne the weight of five different kinds of rail during its 57 years of service. According to a supervisor on this district the tie is good for 30 years more—Railway Age.
